

Shatush Colour Treatment

By Natasha McNamara | Sunday, 10 October 2010

If you're looking for something special and a break from the usual routine of highlights and foils, then treat your hair to one of several new colour techniques from legendary hairstylist Aldo Coppola's Sloane Street salon.

For sexy beach highlights try the Sombrero Miami, which is quite literally a sombrero-shaped headpiece placed on the head that aims to colour only the hair that falls outside the ring. This results in a natural, sun-kissed effect.

GLAMOUR.com tried the Shatush, where hair is back-combed and colour (organic, yay!) is placed on the loose ends, resulting in a natural and impressive finish that prevents re-growth looking too obvious for longer.

Aldo Coppola's chic salon hosts über relaxing shiatsu massage chairs and colour therapy lighting to further relax visitors. Plus, for those looking for a bit more from their visit, check out the beauty rooms and spa.

Several washes later, my hair was much softer and less tangled than it usually is after a regular colour treatment and the Shatush treatment was a quicker job altogether, with no foils and a much better finish - could this be the way forward for colour? We think so!

Shatush from £170. Aldo Coppola, 70 Sloane Avenue, London SW3 3DD;  020 7052 0709
www.aldocoppola.co.uk